As the coronavirus epidemic in Hong Kong subsides, people begin to discuss under what conditions should everyday life resume normal. The Hong Kong Public Opinion Program (HKPOP) under the Hong Kong Public Opinion Research Institute (HKPORI) has constructed the “Post-Epidemic Normality Resumption Indexes (PENRIs)” based on opinion data gathered from scientific surveys. The four indexes developed so far, namely, the “Post-Epidemic Work, School, Gathering Resumption and Public-Facilities Re-opening Indexes”, were released for the first time yesterday, and a few more “Business Resumption Indexes” will be released tomorrow. All indexes will be updated daily at the website <https://www.pori.hk/penri>. Here are the latest results for today:
